

The Practical

Note: this character has been written as someone physically able to get pregnant. If that is not something you would like to play on, please discuss alternatives with your GM (like the character's partner being pregnant or switching characters).

Some time ago and halfway through your university studies, after a particularly politically-charged Christmas dinner, your parents cut you off entirely. You had to make your own way fast and figured prostitution wasn't so different from the casual flings you were so fond of. You weren't so wrong, either, and the money and hours were good. Money is what matters to you so you can enjoy your life and you were dismayed to discover that, once you graduated, available entry-level jobs were paid worse than your side gig. You decided to forego grueling hours and boring tasks to make a career out of "sucking dick for money" as you like to refer to it.

You keep to yourself at work and at home; you've never spoken to your parents since "the great debate" and just made your own way, partners coming and going but none sticking around for too long. You always provide unprotected sex in exchange for quite ridiculous tips, but never tell anyone about it – but now it seems you're in deep shit, because the pregnancy test you took after missing several periods came back positive. So did five others. An abortion would require you to blow a lot of savings to go out-of-state but a pregnancy will rob you of months of future earnings (unless you can convince the Madam that there's a lucrative niche pregnancy fetish crowd) and then you have to deal with adoption or... keeping the baby? Alone?

You're not sure what to do and for the first time really want someone to talk it over with, but if anyone finds out how you got pregnant, you'd be out on your ass. You like to move between brothels whenever you get tired of the same old faces and have only been at the Lily for a few months, but it is pretty cushy – and if the others found out why you got thrown out of this one, you might even have to move to another city (which would also eat up your savings). Regardless of who takes over the Lily after this Madam retires, your options remain the same.

You keep to yourself at work, mostly exchanging light chit-chat with the others but not going into detail about where you're from or your family situation. Your actual sexuality is a mystery to your colleagues and they're even left wondering whether or not you currently have a partner. The Miserable Wretch and The Brown-noser are both a bit tedious for you while The Happy Hooker and The Girlfriend, while empathetic to every situation (and they definitely would be to yours as well), can be a little overwhelming with positivity. The Sweetheart and The Flamboyant, together, might just be the ones to finally pull you out of your shell.

You and The Investor share a keenness for financial security, but fear that if you were to confide in them, they'd turn you in to the Madam with hopes of getting some kind of bonus for it. You respect The Responsible's down-to-earth manner and think they might be good to help you decide on real options for your situation, while The Apple Doesn't Fall Far has almost as much experience as you in brothel-hopping and might be able to help you find somewhere else to go if the Madam does find out about your rule-breaking.