STORYLINE

In the world that we live in The Party maintains an iron grip on every facet of society, enforcing a nightmarish bureaucracy that leaves citizens trapped in a perpetual state of confusion and fear.

Citizens are assigned arbitrary roles and responsibilities, their lives dictated by a labyrinthine system of rules and regulations that change with the whims of the unseen bureaucrats. History was rewritten, and the past became a blur, leaving citizens uncertain about the authenticity of their own memories. The atmosphere of mistrust was so pervasive that citizens dared not speak the truth.

You are five individuals who one day find themselves in front of their workplace only to realize that it has been erased from existence. As you tried to make sense of the disarray around you, a single note caught your attention: "You have been terminated."

The note has left you on the brink of despair. Just when you were on the verge of surrendering to the oppressive reality, a glimmer of hope emerged from the pages of a newspaper - a mysterious job advertisement with a simple yet enigmatic message: "Come for a job interview."

And you are here.

Second version

In the world we live in The Party controls everything, making life very difficult and scary for everyone. People are given random jobs and have to follow a lot of confusing and always changing rules. The Party has also changed history, so no one is sure what's really true anymore. This has made everyone afraid to say what they think.

You are part of a group of five people who show up to work one day, only to find out your position no longer exists. You find a note saying, "You have been terminated," which makes you feel very hopeless. Without a job your life has little purpose. What will the others say? But just when you think there's no way out of this tough situation, you find a ray of hope in a newspaper ad. It's for a job interview, but the ad is mysterious. It simply says, "Come for a job interview." So, that's where you are headed now.
